I have a spinal injury

It has had a significant impact on my mobility and daily activities. My current physical condition requires me to adapt to a new way of life and navigate various challenges.

My mobility is significantly restricted. I may require the use of a wheelchair or other assistive devices to navigate my surroundings. Simple actions like walking, climbing stairs, or getting in and out of vehicles become difficult tasks that require careful coordination and support.

It takes a toll on my emotional well-being as well. There are moments of frustration, sadness, and even anger as I come to terms with the loss of my previous abilities and the need to rely on others for help. It can be disheartening to face the daily obstacles and limitations that this injury imposes.

I get assistance to participate in an outpatient rehabilitation program that helps me adapt to my current mobility and apply it to my daily routine.

I have also been provided with the option to install a wheelchair ramp on the steps outside my house.

I still face the frustration of struggling to do what I used to be able to do easily but my rehab has allowed me to look forward to what I should be able to do again soon.

Plan budget and rules

The National Disability Insurance Scheme is a $20 billion-dollar government initiatives that will shortly be funding up to 500,000 Australian's and have a significant impact on millions of other Australians in terms of employment, services and as stakeholders.

All Participant's get assessed by the NDIS, and get a "Plan", that is essentially a budget. An Participant funded by the NDIA is known as a "Participant". The Participants "goals" are assessed and then strategies are achieving these goals are created across fifteen different categories within three key funding groups: "day to day core living", "capital items", and "building (essentially learning and growth initiatives)". Budgets are created in the categories, in relation to "items" that are unit priced and coded and added together. As of 2021, the average NDIS plan budget is around $50,000 per year, but this can vary widely depending on the individual circumstances. The range of NDIS plan funding can be from as little as a few thousand dollars per year to several hundred thousand dollars per year from where goods and services can be purchased with regard to the maximum unit prices dictated by the NDIS.
